MORE CHEERFUL NEWS FROM ROADS

Reports Show a Broadening of the Margin of the Decrease from Last Year's Level—Specialties Under Pressure—Total Sales; Closing Quotations.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—A keen desire to realize profits was clearly manifest in the action of the stock market today. Professional operators who had bought stocks yesterday on the early indications of success in the New York city bond sale hastened to resell today. The outside demand attracted by the bond sale was not sufficient to absorb this selling and prices gave way sharply.
The professionals turned to the bear side and helped on the decline.

Statistics of railroad earnings for the first week of February indicated a broadening of the margin of decrease from last year's level compared with the average of January earnings. Some of the specialties were again under pressure of the special kind which has been a feature earlier in the week had this had a sympathetic effect on the tone of the general list.

The action of the stock market did not materially alter the conviction of the significance of the New York city bond sale as an evidence of improving health in the financial situation as a whole.

The general bond list today was little influenced by the New York city bond sale. The bank statement showed that whatever loans had been taken out in connection with the city bond sale were from the other banks and trust companies and not from clearing house members.

Bonds were steady and quiet. Total sales par value $2,378,000. U. S.
4% registered advanced 1/2 per cent. on call during the week. Total sales today 424,800 shares including: Copper 2,800; Smelting 41,000; Sugar 1-200; Tobacco 100; C. & O. 500; L. &

PROVISIONS OF BYRD
BLANKET LIQUOR BILL

tion with reference to Sunday excursions.
The bill is designed to restrict the running of railroad trains on Sunday and in its original shape, as introduced by Senator Strode, cut out the running of Sunday excursions.
When the committee considered the bill, that part was stricken out, so that now in its present shape the bill does not interfere with the Sunday excursions.

TWO MARRIAGES TODAY.

Miss Warner to Wed Mr. Nicholas and Miss Routten to Become Mrs.
Padish.

Clerk of the Courts Harry H. Holt yesterday issued marriage licenses to two couples, the weddings to occur today.

The first license was granted Mr.
Alonzo Perkins Padish, a conductor on the street railway line, and Miss Margaret Isabella Routten, who is just eighteen years old.

In the afternoon Mr. Paul Irving Nicholas, a popular young merchant of Phoebus, secured a license to marry Miss Minnie Warner, a most attractive young woman of that town.

In the Police Court, Frank Elwell, colored, who slashed Jane Newsome, a negro woman, a knife, was held for the grand jury on a charge of felonious cutting, by Mayor Thornton F. Jones, yesterday.

GLASGOW'S TEA ROOM

Attractively Arranged the Price of Foodstuffs is Wonderfully Cheap.

It may not strike all travelers newly landed in Glasgow and athirst for information that its tea-rooms form the brightest, and its other shops the darkest, spots in that interesting city, but it did us. Why the tea-rooms should have so captured our imagination I do not know, unless it was that we were touched by the spectacle of so much for so little. Is there any place but a Scotch tea-room where you can lunch to repletion on sixpence (12 cents), and where (added charm!) the feminine touch can satisfy its taste for sweets without shame, since nearly everything in sight is sweet and what is not in sight is not to be had?

Cranston's, the tea-room par excellence of Glasgow, is not an inspiring spot in itself. The main shop on Buchanan street is a long, dark, narrow room where one comes solely to eat, not to indulge a roving eye. But who would not fix his eye, from choice, on a table spread with every variety of bread known to Scotland—scones, soda scones, potato scones, sweet milk scones, currant scones, brown scones, all rather heavy and suggesting indigestion, but all good; bread and butter with curries (curries being covered with sugar), "law-bee haps," oat cakes, and endless other varieties of doughy confection. Then come cakes, and cookies, and buns, and little tarts to further direct the eye; and then, best of all, arranged in a neat square in the center of the table, diminutive pots of jam, holding each enough for one portion of good but not too greedy appetite.

Having taken a bird's-eye view of all these goodies, one's difficulties begin. In the first place, it is a most distracting matter to decide whether to take strawberry, raspberry, black currant or damson jam, and, having decided, to chase the last elusive berry around and around the bottom of the jar before catching and depositing it on one's plate. Then unless you are of such extravagant turn of mind that you disregard the price list propped up in a neat frame in the middle of the table, there are most complicated calculations to be made.
"If a potato scone and butter cost a penny, and a sweet milk scone costs two-pence, and a bun also costs a penny, shall I eat a sweet milk scone, which I do not care for, but which will fill a larger chunk in my internal economy?" It is a dreadful problem, but no more so than to decide whether to take a small cup of tea for twopence, on the chance of not wanting another; or to take the large cup for three-pence in the beginning, and in the end save a penny.

On the whole, the way to enjoy Cranston's to its utmost is to say "Hang the expense," and eat regardless. Then, when, having consumed so many scones and cakes that the suggestion of "another bun" is a deadly insult, you begin a laborious calculation of what you have really eaten, you receive an unexpected thrill at discovering that you have devoured the enormous sum of eight pence halfpenny.

Glasgow's retail stores surprised our American minds much less pleasantly than did the tea-rooms. Nine o'clock is supposed to be the opening time; if it is more convenient to make it later, why, later it is. Scotch merchants must have angelic dispositions —or perhaps it is only a stray American who arrives on the dot—so that it really doesn't matter if the sales-woman is fifteen or twenty minutes late. On the morning we were leaving for the Highlands I found to my horror that I had left my umbrella behind and must buy another at literally the last moment. I flew panting up Renfield street to a nice little shop I knew, to discover the shutters just being taken off. I made a breathless entry and demanded an umbrella of the shop boy, the only person in sight. He looked at me with a hurt expression.

"The shop ain't open yet," mum," he said.
"It is partly open, at least," I answered, "for you are here and so am I.
Please show me the umbrellas, for I'm in a great hurry." I don't think that boy knew the meaning of the word, or else he thought such unseemly haste should be discouraged.

"I don't sell umbrellas, mum," he said, "I only take off the covers."
"Who does sell them, then?" I asked in exasperation. "I suppose there is some one in the shop who can."
"No'm, there ain't," he replied severely. "The young woman as sells hasn't come yet."

I fancy he did not like the expression dawned in my eye, for he hastily retreated to the back of the shop, calling over his shoulder as he paring insult, "Come in later, mum."

Later, indeed! It was ten minutes past nine then, and the train for Oban left at 9:30.

I tried two or three nearby shops with the same experience, and actually did return "later," humbled in spirit, to my first, where a deliberate woman who had just arrived deigned to sell me what I wanted.

The only places that seemed to open on time were the fruiterers, where we saw the most gorgeous grapes, quite beyond our modest purse, but worth going to Scotland to look at. Magnificent great bunches they were, a foot long and nearly a foot wide, with every grape perfect, arranged on stands like card-houses, covered with white paper and with a background of their own leaves to bring out the full beauty of their color—white, green, yellow and purple of every shade from the delicate pink-ish purple to deepest blue-black. Our mouths watered as we looked at them, but we made haste to reflect that it would be a sin to eat anything so beautiful; and feeling like the philosophical fox of the fable, we filled our bags with an inferior variety and sorrowfully turned our steps toward the train which was to bear us away from this pleasant city. It is a pleasant city despite the pall of smoke that hangs over it and tinges its newest buildings to hoary, beguiling monuments of antiquity in a year's time.

And though it shattered some of our preconceived notions of the superiority of the Old World to the new—notions of the sort that, in their desire to be humble and fair-minded, many Americans have allowed to be thrust upon them by those "supposed to know"—we have only the kindest memories of Glasgow.

IN ARMORY HALL.

Grecian Play "Pygmalion and Galatea" Will be Given March 2.
The announcement that "Pygmalion and Galatea," the Grecian comedy, is to be presented in Armory Hall by amateurs, under the direction of Mr. John W. Skinner, caused much interest yesterday. Mr. Skinner has given quite a number of good productions, and it is expected that this attraction will exceed any of his former efforts. He has carefully selected the cast and rehearsals are being conducted almost nightly. The sale of seats has started and the demand for tickets is already surpassing the expectations of those associated with Mr. Skinner in giving the play.
